Market Outlook

The Indonesian bond market posted negative performance in September 2026, with the yield on the 10-year Indonesian government bond hovering around 7.15%, up from 7.05% at the end of August 2026. Globally, the yield on the 10-year US government bond also showed a negative trend; it stood at approximately 5.28% at the end of September 2026 rising from 4.75% at the end of August driven by geopolitical developments and a weakening global economy. These developments contributed to a strengthening US dollar worldwide and increased pressure on the exchange rates of emerging market nations. Foreign capital flows into the Indonesian bond market recorded a net inflow of IDR 1 trillion during September 2026. On the domestic front, the BI-Rate remained unchanged at 5.75%. This decision served as a further measure to stabilize the Rupiah exchange rate against heightened global volatility stemming from the conflict in the Middle East, as well as a pre-emptive step to keep inflation in 2026 and 2027 within the government-set target range of 2.5%±1%.
