Market Outlook

Indonesia's equity market closed lower in September 2026, with the JCI declining 6.96% MoM, driven by net foreign outflows of Rp8.75tn. The Rupiah also weakened, pressured by higher UST 10Y yields that raised the global hurdle rate, the Fed's hike in the Fed Funds Rate to 3.75–4.00% for the first time since 2023, and Brent prices rising above US$100/bbl amid escalating geopolitical tensions. The combination of higher global yields and oil prices heightened concerns over Indonesia's external and fiscal trade-offs. Domestic pressure also came from new mining regulations restricting transactions between mining licence holders and their affiliates, as well as agrarian reform regulations covering land redistribution and land ownership limits. On the other hand, the IDX lowered the stock price floor from Rp50 to Rp1 to improve price discovery and liquidity, alongside adjustments to the upper and lower auto-rejection limits. On the fiscal front, President Prabowo replaced Purbaya and appointed Suahasil as the new Finance Minister, which is expected to ease investor concerns over the direction of fiscal policy and internal dynamics within the Ministry of Finance. On the macroeconomic front, Indonesia's manufacturing PMI returned to expansionary territory, rising to 52.4 in September 2026 from 49.8 in August 2026. The trade surplus reached US$3.55bn in August 2026, with exports growing 6.72% YoY, supported by higher non-oil and gas exports. Meanwhile, imports increased 19.09% YoY, primarily driven by a 30.73% increase in oil and gas imports. On a cumulative basis, the January–August 2026 trade surplus reached US$7.25bn, with exports rising 4.74% while imports grew faster at 19.84%. Headline inflation increased to 3.19% YoY in August 2026 from 2.28% in July 2026, remaining within BI's 1.5–3.5% target range. Underlying price pressures also strengthened, with core inflation rising to 2.92% YoY, the highest level since March 2023. On a MoM basis, CPI increased 0.21%, reversing from a 0.14% contraction in July 2026. BI kept the BI Rate unchanged at 5.75% at its 22–23 September meeting, with the Deposit Facility and Lending Facility rates at 4.75% and 6.50%, respectively. BI continued to rely on non-rate instruments to maintain Rupiah stability without raising interest rates, including higher hedging incentives to attract capital inflows and strengthen foreign exchange reserves.
